I would like to get the errorMessage of a validation error that I custom made. It is in a swift class. I have set a function wich is not really working. I'm getting always nil, even if I have set an errorMessage on the variable that I'm sending to the function. Here is the piece of code I'm working on, class MyCustomValidator: Validation { override func validate(value: String) -> Bool { if value.isEmpty { return false } let errorMessage = "insert error here" return true } } In my viewController: self.myCustomValidator.validate("") // I'm getting always nil for errorMessage A: Try this: self.myCustomValidator.validate(nil) It's working for me. Hope it helps. Q: Possible to produce expected result without try? I've been familiar with Java since 1.5 and I noticed something strange in the output of this code:

public class Test { public static void main(String[] args) throws Exception { try { Integer a = new Integer("abcdef"); } catch (Exception e) { System.

STICKER +...Receive coupon codes and special offers. .Q: Converting my string variable to int: "cannot be converted to type int" I'm trying to convert a string to int, using this code: int value = (int)strValue; However, I get this error: Error 1 Cannot convert type'string' to 'int' Can anyone explain to me what I'm doing wrong and/or what I need to do? A: All strings are actually numeric, so you need to do: int value = Int32.Parse(strValue); or long value = Int64.Parse(strValue); If you're dealing with UNICODE you probably want to add: int.TryParse(strValue, NumberStyles.Any, CultureInfo.InvariantCulture, out value); or long.TryParse(strValue, NumberStyles.Any, CultureInfo.InvariantCulture, out value); If you're just dealing with some funky coding language, then I'd recommend: `var value = 0; bool success = int.TryParse(strValue, out value);` I've used this a few times in PHP. And it's used a lot in Java as well. A
